

Lisa DiTullio

Lisa DiTullio is a leading force in project and business management. She is the principal of Lisa DiTullio & Associates, LLC, a PMI Registered Education Provider and consulting practice dedicated to introducing project management as a business competency, enabling organizations to improve decision-making, instill accountability, and enhance communications. Her group offers training programs and advisory services which support project/business management and team building activities. They also provide set-up of enterprise project management office (PMO) models.

Lisa is the editor of ProjectBestPractices, a quarterly newsletter from ProjectWorld, a regular contributor for the Silicon ValleyPM and Project Connections blogs, and a contributor to PM Network Magazine. She's the author of Simple Solutions: How "Enterprise Project Management" Supported Harvard Pilgrim Health Care's Journey from Near Collapse to #1. Lisa's second book, Project Team Dynamics: Increased Speed, Enhanced Performance is due out in early 2010. Lisa is also a 2010 PMI SeminarsWorld® provider and a distance-instructor for Prodevia Learning.

As past director of the project management office (PMO) at Boston-based Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, Lisa was a core member of the turnaround team for an organization that went from being placed in State-supervised receivership in 1999 to being the #1 Health Plan in America on the U.S. News & World Report four years in a row.

While at Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, Lisa established a small consulting practice, housed within the organization's PMO; the mission of the unit was to share simple project and business management best practices with other organizations, so they, too, could reap the benefits of project management-to be both effective and efficient in delivering their priority initiatives. She believes the secret for success is keeping practices simple. Serving vanilla for success, the practice not only supported Harvard Pilgrim Health Care from near collapse to national acclaim, it also helped many clients do more with less.

Lisa is a recognized international speaker in her field. Scores of organizations - from college campuses to governmental agencies to Fortune 100 companies have gained from Lisa's insights and tell-it-like-it-is keynotes and programs. Audience members leave educated, engaged and energized - armed with actionable practices for immediate success.

Lisa actively supports her community; she is on the Board of Directors for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, and is chair of the Women's Business Connection, a preeminent women's organization within the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. She is also a member of the ATHENA PowerLink® Governing Body, a group which oversees a program to provide women-owned businesses an opportunity to work with a panel of experts to grow their business.
